Exeter.

She was a lifelong resident of Newmarket and was born in Newmarket High School in 1939 and was known to everyone as Bea, Mom and Grammy. She was the daughter of the late Fredrick and Mary Olszanowski Labonte; mother to Elaine Brooks of Portsmouth; grandmother to Sheila Pettengill and husband, Tom, Gary Brooks and wife, Kathy, of Fla., Tracey Deyette and friend, Raoul Maitais, of Newmarket; great-grandmother to Danny Brooks and wife, Jessica, of Ga., Shelly Avery of Greenland, Nina Beauchesne of Newmarket, Alicia Brooks of Fla., and great-great-grandmother to Jarod, Destiny and Joseph Brooks of Ga.

She spent many years working as a weaver in the textile mills at Gallant Manufactory in Newmarket, also as a stitcher at Sam Smith Shoe Shop and Timberland Shoe Factory. After retiring, she returned to work at Wendy's in Exeter, where she enjoyed meeting new people and keeping the place immaculate. She stayed until a broken hip got her home recuperating and news of great-grandchildren on the way gave her a new idea. She took care of all of them as they each came into this world. Grammy wasn't only our grandmother, she was everyone's Grammy. Child and adult friends of all of ours called her Grammy also.

She lived a very blessed and grateful life. She knew what mattered most in life and even more important what didn't. Fancy cars, furniture and jewelry were not important to her. "Nice to look at but I don't need it." What was important were happy children and family all around the dinner table, hot blueberry muffins and lots of kisses from Tracey's puppies. She also had her favorite shows like "Dr. Phil" because he helps all these people. She loved watching "Dancing With The Stars" with Sheila. She also enjoyed her gatherings at the Senior Center in town where she could see all her friends and bring her famous "millionaire pie." We will all miss you!

He later received successive promotions to high level administrative positions by working at the former Boston Naval Shipyard and later at the Office of Supervisor of Shipbuilding, U.S. Navy, Quincy, Mass., and at Portsmouth Naval Shipyard as administrative officer in the production department, and retiring as director, industrial relations, at the Portsmouth Naval Shipyard in 1984.

In 1946, he married his loving Irene, and together they made their home in Natick, Mass., and moved to Stratham in 1962, where he actively served on the Stratham Planning Board for 20 years. He married Faith Callanan in August 2006. They lived in Stratham until recently moving to Newmarket.
